Certified Nurse Midwives are licensed health care providers who have been educated in midwifery and nursing. In addition to a degree in nursing, they hold a graduate degree in nurse midwifery and have passed the national board examination. A Certified Nurse Midwife can prescribe medications, order tests, and provide medical treatment caring for obstetric and gynecologic patients. If a medical problem arises during pregnancy or labor, nurse midwives work with physicians to ensure the best and safest care. Nurse Midwives value individualized, evidence-based care that promotes compassionate partnership with women.
